The two gave each other as much love as possible between them and their family. This includes <sup>3</sup> they come up with their names, "Just kidding, I'm Fred," and when the twins came of age and appeared everywhere, "Just because they're allowed to use magic now, doesn't mean you have to whip your wands for everything!" 7 The Howler Ah sÅ, the Howler. She's over the moon when Lockhart wants to take a picture with Harry for the pen! dictum and takes all the copies of Magical Me from her children to be signed. A lost and confused Harry searched for Platform 9 3/4 after Hagrid abandoned it to his own devices. The films did not include all of her moments from the books, but the scenes that were shown were enough to make members of the audience love her. The inquiry they received from their mother, who were exasperated and furious about what had been done and delighted to see Harry, made for one of Molly-Weasley's most appreciative scenes. In addition to the fact that they were crushed by the Whipping Willow and told by the masters of Hogwarts, Ron also received Howler from his mother, who opened for everyone to listen in the Great Hall. 9 "Where have you been?" Movies do not allow every moment of their chemistry to be shown on the screen, or their relationships with their parents. And if Weasley could not be there for his son, he was sure he was going to protect his daughter from Bellatrix's assault.
